MARRIAGE OF AN AMERICAN NIGHT-INGALE IN PARIS.

Further Particulars of the Brilliant Scene at the Passionist Fathers--Hungarian Union--Sentiment of the Powers. Foreign News Notes.

MADRID, Oct. 3.—The dispute between Germany and Spain growing out of their claims to Caroline islands has at last been amicably settled without intervention of a third party. The terms of settlement are: Germany acknowledges the rights of the Spanish government to occupy the island of Yap, the principal of the group, while Spain in turn grants Germany the right of free navigation and commerce, and also agrees to allow Germany the privilege of maintaining Spanish stations on the island of the Caroline group. The mediation of the pope is therefore now unnecessary as the terms agreed on finally settle the dispute.

The Earl of Shaftesbury.
LONDON, Oct. 5.—The Earl of Shaftesbury is dead. The London and provincial papers are filled with columns extolling the Earl's character and the virtues of the late Lord Shaftesbury. The Daily Telegraph says his "long and perfect life had no day mispassed, no hour without some loving kindness, and the tears which will flow and the flowers on his tomb will spring from love and gratitude."

His last moments were of a most peaceful character, and up to the end he retained consciousness and conversed with the utmost sensibility. He expected his death, and his gentleness to his children in the last hour was most touching. Lord Shaftesbury devoted two letters to his daughter, the Duchess of Devonshire, and the Duke of Devonshire to the good Earl's life has inherited his father's benevolence.

London Topics.
LONDON, Oct. 5.—The Telegraph has a caustic and bitter article against the degradation of the literary art and pension trust and quotes instances in support of its attack. It complains its teacher that the administration of the two hundred a year set apart since 1837 for literature and art is a disappointment, and a disonor, and the fund has become little more than a political convenience. It is a positive scandal that this money should be diverted from the purpose originally intended to go toward the payment of cabinet debts.

Mr. Howard Grubb, of Dublin, has just received a contract from the admiralty to erect a telescope, the largest telescope in the world—a 38-inch diameter refractor—for the royal observatory at Greenwich.

He Must Die.
FRANKFORT, Oct. 5.—The supreme court has rejected the appeal of Julius Lieke, the murderer of Dr. Rumpf, for a commutation of the death sentence to imprisonment for life.

Personals and Politics.
LONDON, Oct. 5.—The Right Rev. Henry Cotton, D.D., bishop of Ealing, is seriously ill. His trouble is said to be the result of Lord Randolph Churchill, arrived in Dublin to consult with Mr. Holmes, the attorney general for Ireland, as to the manner of employing a lawyer under the common law for the suppression of bootlegging.

The National Liberal Federation at a meeting adopted resolutions favoring abolition of primogeniture and other forms of entail and advocating security of tenure for farmers and compulsory compensation for improvements on lands. The meeting urged also the purchase of lands by the government for agricultural purposes.

The postoffice authorities were not disappointed in their anticipation of a ruinous telegraph business on the granting of the extension of the cable to the continent. The returns up to 5 o'clock show a largely increased business. The majority of telegrams sent were of a domestic character, the senders confining them within the limit of twelve words.

That Wall Street Affair.
NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The following statement is made concerning the failure of Win. Heath & Co.: The liabilities of the firm are placed at from $1,750,000 to $2,000,000, among which are the following: G. P. Morosini, $250,000; Gay, $250,000; James T. Low, $400,000; Soutter & Co., $250,000; Addison Conner, $60,000; W. H. Smith, $200,000. The firm's stock exchange is estimated at $300,000. Mr. H. N. Smith's liabilities are placed at $200,000, of which $1,200,000 is due to Win. Heath & Co., and the Worthenburghs are also reported to be owed considerable amounts. His assets are supposed to be nominal.

Genesta Going Home.
BROOKLYN, Oct. 5.—The Genesta has arrived at Pollon's wharves. The work of skidding out her cargo was completed under the supervision of Capt. Carter. A large crowd of people watched the movement of the crew from the bridge street and commented on her construction. As soon as her jury mast is stepped she will be towed down to Staten Island. Capt. Carter says the Genesta will be sent by rail for England on Tuesday or Wednesday next. The crew were busily engaged in getting things on board the yacht ready for the ocean voyage.

And Sultans.
ANAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 5.—Corporal M. J. Rutledge of the United States marine corps, who was sent to the coast of Africa, was particularly sober and industrious, and was engaged in the study of law. No cause is known for the suicide except his grief at the illness of his mother, which he said to have weighed heavily on his mind. He was from Wilmington, Del.

Wreck on the Valley Road.
CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 5.—The report on the Valley road wreck has been greatly exaggerated. Further particulars show that no man was injured, and he not fatally. The engine was badly wrecked, but no other damage was done, and the wreck is being rapidly cleared away.

Elmer Haines, found horribly mangled on the railroad near West Seneca, O., is believed to have been murdered, and two men have been arrested on suspicion.

ASPHYXIATES HERSELF

WENT TO A HOTEL TO DIE BECAUSE SHE COULD NOT GET A LIVING.

"Give Me a Small Room, the Smallest One You've Got," So That She Might Smother Herself the Quicker—No Hope or Money—Tired of Life.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—A young woman called early in May last at the boarding kept by Mrs. Heinmiller at 222 East Thirty-second street and asked if she could have a room. She was little, rather pretty, and her large blue eyes, wavy brown hair, which was not made into a bun, and a way of speaking which made it perfectly natural to believe what she said. She told the landlady that she had trouble and had not much money, but added that she had good clothes and that she meant to pay her way. She secured the room, and the longer Mrs. Heinmiller knew the better they came to like her. Mrs. Heinmiller found that she could do all kinds of needlework beautifully. Mrs. Heinmiller said she had better than at work, all day, enjoyed sitting around the room evenings, talking to her and watching as she worked, and over the worst kind of rags and tears. Mrs. Heinmiller's daughter was in love with the newcomer, because she had a romantic history and told it to Miss Heinmiller, thus forcing upon her a young person food for many days' reflection.

The story was this: The young woman's name was Anna, and she was thirty-three years old, although she looked only twenty-five even after she was dead. She was a widow, and her husband, who was a tailor, and her home was in Baltimore. When she was seventeen years old she married a restaurant-keeper in Baltimore. She left home because of his infidelity. Since then she had been taking care of herself, waiting for her divorce suit to be settled. Her mother, Mrs. Bennett, lived at 483 Third avenue, and she had two brothers, one living in Baltimore and another in Wilmington, Del. She hoped to have her divorce soon, and then she would settle definitely how she was going to live.

During her stay at the Heinmiller's Mrs. Bennett worked hard all the time for the family and taking in sewing from the outside, a good deal of it from the wife of a bankrupt living at 483 Third avenue. After she had been there a short time her husband came to see her, and repeated the wife's story twice. The interview was evidently not a success, and each left the young woman nervous and excited. It was understood in the house that the divorce had been granted, and that every thing was settled.

After that no one came to see Mrs. Bennett, but a young man very rarely and only early in the day, so that young Heinmiller never saw him. His name is Edward Brock, and he is a young man.

About a month ago the Heinmiller's noticed that Mrs. Bennett was becoming very pale, and she herself said that she did not know what was the matter. She had scarcely anything left, and would soon have to depend altogether upon the money earned by her husband, who was now in the bread, even if she worked eighteen hours a day. At last, four weeks ago, she said she could not stand it any longer. She was getting into debt, and she had no prospects of getting money to pay. So she packed up her trunks, left them in Mrs. Heinmiller's care, and went away without saying where she was going.

Mrs. Heinmiller supposed that she was going to visit some relatives in the country, and she ordered him to take care of her, and keep her room waiting for her, but days and then weeks slipped away until it was decided that she would not return.

She did come back to find that her room had just been rented to some one else and that she had no house for her to go to. She said that she had tried to get a room, but had failed as her friends had no money to help her to do so. At last, sitting with the family and crying with Mrs. Heinmiller, she went away without speaking at all her trunks or saying where she was going.

Not long after midnight a woman went up to the last floor in the Morton house and there ten days ago she had engaged a room for her. The boy told her she could not have a room but she told him that was nonsense, and she went up the stairs. The clerk came and thinking was strange for a young woman to be looking for a room at that hour, began to say that it was against the rule of the house to admit ladies unaccompanied unless they were known. The young woman interrupted him before he got through.

"Very well, you know me," she said. "I am the Mrs. Bennett who stopped here with my husband a few days ago." It was the Mrs. Bennett who had lived with the Heinmiller's, and the clerk recognized her as a young woman who had come there ten days ago when she registered there. "W. L. Bennett and wife, Baltimore."

"Now that you know me," Mrs. Bennett said, nervously fingering a small, soft cloth which she carried under her arm, "please show me to the room I have engaged. Give me a room in some out of the way corner, where there are not many people, so I may not be disturbed in the morning. And," she added, "give me a small room, the smallest room you've got, for I never am comfortable in a big room."

The clerk said it was all right and assigned the lady to room 100, carrying out her instructions to the letter. The room was a small, dark room, with a third floor, with a doorway for a narrow bed, and a small window looking out into an air shaft. The daylight streamed out through the transom for a few minutes, and Mrs. Bennett had locked her door, and the night watchman heard some one moving about at what struck him as a very strange hour.

At about half past 8, as he was going round the second time, he smelled gas in the hall, and he went in to see what was the matter. He found the door of the room open, and he saw the woman lying on the floor, her head against the wall, and her arms outstretched. He tried to push open the door, but it was fastened. He called out, but there was no answer. He tried to push open the door, but it was fastened. He called out, but there was no answer. He tried to push open the door, but it was fastened. He called out, but there was no answer.

McArdle, the watchman, tried to push open the door, and found it fastened.

LABOR TROUBLES.

Coal Miners in the Wheeling District Shut Out—Winning Prospects.

WHEELING, W. Va., Oct. 5.—A fresh labor trouble has broken out among the coal miners in this vicinity, and one which affords good opportunity for a new. Indeed, there was a very narrow escape from a serious riot at the Wheeling Creek mines. The cause of this new trouble is, so far as is known, as follows:

About a week ago a committee of miners working for the Pittsburg & Wheeling Coal company, waited upon the managers and informed them that four men had joined the National association, and made the demand that a discharged workman, Michael Moran, be reinstated, or that another man be hired in his place. Mr. Walters, one of the superintendents, went to Cleveland and had a consultation with the directors, the result of which was a determination to close all the mines of the company between Moran, Cleveland and Wheeling, and discharge the men, over two thousand in all, who were at work.

This order went into effect, and all the mines belonging to the company in Belmont, county of this state, were shut down. The miners who were shut down until non-union men can be obtained. At the Wheeling Creek mines two hundred men were shut out, and the National association, which was formed by the union and non-union men, were shut out by a mob and narrowly escaped being killed. The union to break the strike, the National association, Amalgamation recently formed at Indianapolis, and includes nearly all the coal miners in this vicinity, and the result of the coal mining strike.

The undertaker was sent to the mother and brothers, and one addressed to W. L. Bennett at Baltimore was answered. The undertaker said that he would bury the body, but that friends of Bennett's would call at the hotel to do what was needed, and that he would come on as soon as possible. Later in the day two gentlemen called at the hotel, requested that their names might not be mentioned, and took charge of the dead woman's effects.

WHITE HOUSE PARLORS IN A NEW DRESS FOR THE SEASON.

More Inquiries About John W. McKnight Who is a "Suspect"—Assigned From His Club—Superintendent of Coast Surveys—Washington Notes.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The White House will soon be in shape to receive visitors in all its parts. The carpet was placed in the East Room, the immense curtains hung and the summer coverings of the furniture removed. The carpets were also put down in the Red, Blue and Green parlors, though the curtains will not be hung in them until today. These parlors have been practically closed since the departure of Miss Cleveland, though there is a great desire among all lady visitors to the White House to see these rooms, but few were accorded that privilege during the summer. On and after Monday all the lower part of the White House, except the state dining room, will be open to the inspection of all who desire to see it.

Several more inquiries have been received at the postoffice department in regard to the appointment of John W. McKnight as a postal card agent at Charleston, N. Y. The question asked is whether the McKnight appointment is the same John W. McKnight who was a favorite contractor under the reign of "Boss" Shepherd in this city. The Contractor McKnight left here several years ago. Before his departure he was indicted by the United States grand jury for receiving by the sale of patented process for making artificial pavements. Curiously enough the United States district attorney—though it has been on the calendar for over two years—called up the case and asked that the indictment be nolle prosequi. He said the principal witness, Mr. Davidson of Star Route notoriety—had left the city, and his attendance could not be secured to prosecute the case. When McKnight was resident of this city he was one of the bosses in Republican politics, having a peculiar influence among colored voters. He was elected at different times to several local offices as a Republican.

The postoffice department has received information that Mr. Henry Donavin, chief of the letter carriers of Chicago, has resigned his position as president of the Young Men's Democratic council. As has been previously stated Mr. Donavin was informed by the postmaster general that, notwithstanding the opinion of the Chicago postmaster, Mr. Judd, to the contrary, the interests of the postal service required that he should not take any active part in a political organization. Mr. Donavin decided that his official position paid him better than the political place and he immediately disconnected himself with the latter. Since the declaration of Professor Agassiz's naval officers are much interested in the appointment of the next superintendent of the coast survey, because from the close alliance of the two services and the important part in its administration which the navy is by law forced to assume, the question is to it a vital one. From the beginning it is alleged their candidate has been Professor John M. Brooke, formerly of the navy and of late professor in the Washington and Lee university of Virginia. His scientific attainments thirty years ago made deep sea soundings possible, and the special training he received in the service has been supplemented by a wider experience in civil life, which naval officers say specially qualifies him for the successful administration of the important branch of government service. The appointment is a presidential one and is one, if not the only one, that does not require confirmation by the senate.

Edward McSweny, the famous suspect, whose release from an English prison was being delayed by Minister Lowell, and who upon his return to this country in the early part of last fall took an active part in the campaign in New York, has been provided for at last. McSweny had an ambition to be appointed collector of the port of San Francisco, but failing in that regard to take anything else in the way of an office that might be lying around. He was told by Secretary Manning to proceed to his home in San Francisco immediately and that upon his arrival there, he would receive an appointment either as appraiser or assistant appraiser in the custom house at San Francisco. Both places have been made vacant by death. Mr. McSweny will not know which place he is to receive until he arrives there. He departed for San Francisco in gloom. The position will pay $5,000 if he gets the first or $3,000 per year if he receives the place as assistant appraiser.

It is understood that Rev. Father Chapelle, the pastor of St. Matthew's church, the most fashionable of the Catholic churches of Washington, will soon be appointed bishop for the entire diocese. Father Mackin, of Baltimore, who was recently appointed an assistant pastor at St. Matthew's, will, it is understood, succeed him as pastor at St. Matthew's. Father Chapelle has taken a very active part in the organization of the proposed National Catholic university in this city, the site for which was recently purchased. He is a Frenchman and is very popular in diplomatic circles here.

Pugilistic Lawyers.
BOSTON, Oct. 5.—Two well known lawyers, one having an office in State street and the other in Faneuil hall square, had a glove fight in a well known club room at the South end. The affair grew out of a heated controversy as to the relative merit of noted pugilists. Four rounds were fought, Queensbury rules. Tim McCarthy was referee. The fight was declared a draw. One lawyer lost a front tooth and the other had his eye spoiled for some time to come.

Re-opening Public Schools.
MONTE ALA, Oct. 5.—There has been a decided movement on foot all summer by the colored people in favor of colored teachers for the colored public schools, and the recent appointments not being satisfactory to them they held a meeting and resolved to boycott the principal school devoted to the instruction of their children. The attendance at the opening of this school was but twenty-five out of a roll of two hundred and thirty pupils.

Struck Oil.
TROY, N. Y., Oct. 5.—While digging for the foundation of the projected blast furnace on Braker Island, near this city, several small pools of petroleum were found at a distance of twenty feet below the surface. It is believed that by drilling a well will be found in paying quantities and the Troy Steel & Iron Company is about to try the experiment.
